

CONTENTS OF VOL. I.

A TRIP UP THE HOOGHLY.

CHAPTER I.

Preliminary remarks.—The date of the earliest trip.—Chitpore.—Legend of Chitraswari.—Cossipore.—Burranagur.—Duckinashore.—Balli.—Penhatty.—Sumaj of Raghub Pundit.—Khurdah.—The Gossains.—Mahesh.—Serampore.—Barrackpore.—The Hindoo Lady of Job Charnock.—Ghiretty.—Chandernagore.—The French Revolution there.—Chinsurah.—Hooghly.—The annihilation of the Portuguese power in Bengal.—Satgaon.—Triveni.—Doomurdah.—The robber-chief Issur Baboo.—Sooksagur.—Chagdah.—Goopteparah.—Santipoor.—Kulna.—Nuddea.—Traditions of its origin.—Its celebrity as a place of learning.—History of Choitunya.—Present state of the Brahmins of Nuddea.—A Gymnosophist.—Jahn-nugger.—Brahmaditala.—Snake-charmers and snake-players.—Krishnugger.—Anecdote of convict labour.—Rajah Krishna Chunder Roy.—The poet Bharut Chunder.—Agradweep.—Cutwa.—Choitunya's adoption of Dundeeism.—Clive and the guardian angel of Britain.—Plassey.—The river Adjai.—Bisramtullah.—Soopoor.—Rajah Surath.—The vagabond Sunnyassi.—Kenduli, the birth-place of Joydeva.—Doobrajpoor.—Hot wells of Bukkesur.—Soory.—The old woman of eighty-six.—Cynthia.—Jammo-Kundee.—Festival of Ras-jatra.—Berhampore.—The Irish Raja of Hurriannah.—Kasimbazar.—Moorshedabad, as it was and as it is.—The new palace of the Nabob Nazim.—His Zenana.—Jungipore.—Sooty.—The ruins of Gour page 1

CHAPTER II.

Rajmahal.—The Mootee-Jhurna waterfall.—Secreegully.—The Terriagurry Pass.—Peer-Pointee.—Colgong.—Bhagulpore.—Cleveland's monuments.—Mount Mandar.—The rock of Jangeerah.—Sultangung.—The ancient Buddhist Vihara, or monastery.—Jumalpore tunnel.—Hot springs of Seetakoond.—Monghyr.—Ancient Palibothra and modern Patna.—Bankipore.—The sacred Peepul tree of Buddha.—Herihar-Chetra Mela and Sonopore Races.—Dinapore.—The Soane Bridge.—Arrah.—Chuprah.—Ghazipore.—Lord Cornwallis's tomb.—Chunar.—Trimbukjee Danglia, the ex-minister of Baja Row.—The Almighty's seat at Chunar.—Mirzapore.—The temple of Bindachul	95

-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

A TOUR TO THE NORTH-WEST.

CHAPTER III.

Introductory remarks.—Railway in India.—Pundooa tower.—Battle of the Cow.—The ghost of a bovine Bhuggobuttee.—The iron rod, or Shah Sufi's walking-stick.—Peer-pukur and Fatikhan, or the tame alligator.—Boinchi.—The robber in India.—The Amazon Kali.—Mamaree.—Burdwan.—The tale of Biddya and Soondra.—Biddyapotta, or the abode of Biddya.—The Maun-surrobur, or Raja Maun's tank.—The Mushan , or the place of Soondra's execution.—The Nabobhaut.—Shere Afkun's tomb.—The old Rajbaree.—The Maharajah of Burdwan.—Kristoshair and female swimmers.—The Dilkhoosa-baug.—The menagerie and its lions.—The future of Hindoo shrines and temples	139
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER IV.

Mankur.—Paneeghur.—Legend of Byjnath.—Hindoo opinion of coals.—The petrified forest at Singarim.—Raneegunge.—Hindoo and Anglo-Saxon characteristics.—The future of Raneegunge.—Its collieries.—The Damooder.—The Grand Trunk Road.—Dawk travelling.—The Barakur river.—The Barakur serai.—Young Bengal's picture of the prospective of India.—The Santhals, an aboriginal race.—Their homes and habits.—Santhal females.—Santhal polity and religion.—The hill-tribes of India.—Taldangah bungalow	161
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER V.

Mount Parisnath.—Topechancee.—The Hindoostanee proverb about Bengal.—Jain temple at Parisnath.—Doomree.—The desolation of the hill-regions.—The man carried by a tiger.
-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	--

—A gentleman's encounter with a bear.—The break-down of a dawk-gharry.—Burhee.—Dunwah Pass.—Barrak-serai.—The sick child.—Legend of the Fulgoo river.—Shergotty.—The Vishnupud at Gaya.—Perpetual widowership of the Gayalese.—Antiquities of Oomga.—The legend of the Nerbudda and Soane.—Deyree.—Rotasgurh.—Koer Sing and Ummer Sing.—The Gossain-talao.—Sasseram.—Haseyn Khan's tomb.—The tomb of Shere Shah.—Legend of the Caramnassa river.—Rajah Trisanku and Young Bengal 202

CHAPTER VI.

Benares.—Its situation upon the Trident of Shiva and exemption from earthquakes.—Legend of Vyas-Kasi interpreted.—Hindoo characteristics of Benares.—The great antiquity, and description of that city in a Tamul drama.—The many changes in its site, and the origin of its present name.—Its modern features.—The fort of Benares.—The Rajghaut.—Khottah architecture.—The idols and temples.—Various sectarian influences at various times.—Bheloopoor, the birth-place of Parisnath.—The Ranee Dowager of Vizianagram.—Ghaut-scenes at Benares.—Teelabhandessur, and his history.—The legend of Munikurnika-ghaut.—The observatory.—Madoo-raike-dhârara, or the mosque of Aurungzebe.—Ramnugger.—The temple of Biseswara.—The Gyan-Bapi.—The temple of Unna Poorna.—Sunnyassees and Bhoyrubbees.—Sameness of sight-seeing in Benares.—The Chouk.—The Benares college.—Comparison of Sanscrit and English.—Summing up of the account of Benares.—Secrole.—Church Mission School.—Warren Hastings at Benares in 1781, and the Englishman there in 1860.—A Mofussil magistrate and a Calcutta attorney.—The English burial-ground at Secrole.—The mutiny at Benares.—The Bengalee-tola, or the quarter of the Bengalees.—Sarnath.—The Buddhist temple of Dhamek.—Choukandi, or Luri-ka-kodan.—Description of Benares in the Kasi-khund.—Destruction of Sarnath 236

CHAPTER VII.

Allahabad.—The Gauges and Jumna.—Shaving operation at their confluence.—The Allahabad mela.—Antiquity of the city.—Ancient Hindoo Republic at Allahabad.—Legend of the Seraswattee river.—The Allahabad fort.—The transmi-gration of Akber from a Hindoo Brahmin to a Mahomedan emperor.—Importance of Allahabad during the mutiny.—Patalpooree, or the subterranean temple.—Bheema's Gada or Lat.—Jehangeer and his Marwaree Begum.—Martial law at Allahabad.—Stories of the mutiny.—Hindoostanee peasant-women.—The Duria-ghaut.—Bhradwaj Muni's hermitage.—The Chusero Bagh.—The rebel Moulivie and his well.—Battle of the Shoes.—The future of Allahabad.—The valley of the Doab.—Berhampore.—Futtehpore.—Cawnpore, past and present.—Shah Behari Lal's ghaut.—Nana and his council.—Miss Wheeler.—The House of Massacre.—Intrenchments of General Wheeler.—Suttee-Chowra-ghaut.—Ancient Khetryas and modern Sepoys.—The Ganges canal.—The visionary attorney.—Idolatry in Hindoostan and Bengal.—Chowbepore.—Mera-ka-serai.—Kanouge.—Buddha's tooth there in former times.—The ancient Hindoo citadel.—The Rang-Mahal.—Hindoo and Mahomedan accounts of Kanouge criticized.—The Grand Trunk Road in the Doab.—The drought of 1860.—The famine of 1861.—Mutiny—ruins along the road.—A mango tope.—Mynporee.—Shecoabad.—The Hindoostanee and Bengalee compared.—Former insecurity and present security of travelling in the Doab.—European fugitives during the mutiny.—Ferozabad.—Field of the wreck of Hindoo independence.—Approach to Agra . . . 301

CHAPTER VIII.

First view of Agra.—A Jumna sandbank.—Feizi.—The Gool-fushun and Charbagh of Baber.—The Etmad-ud-Dowla.—Fort of Agra.—Darsan Darwaza, or Gate of Sights.—The Lallah host.—Young Hindoostan's parlour.—Excursion to the fort.—Umra Sing Ka fatuck.—Dewani-khas.—Sheesha Mahl, or Hall of Mirrors.—Akber's harem.—Mogul fancy fairs.—The Phanseghur.—Dewanni-aum.—Mootee Musjeed.—Shah Jehan's bath.—Jehangeer's drinking-cup.—Great gun of Agra.—The Taj.—Its story.—Its architect.—Commemorative poems.—The public works of the Hindoos, the Mahomedans, and the English in India.—Taj gardens.—Antiquity of Agra.—Description of, by Jehangeer.—The Agra of 1860.—Its Chowk.—Varieties of its population.—Peculiarities of the Hindoostanees.—The Agra college.—Memorials of British rule at Agra.—Hindoostanee opinion of the Income Tax 382